+ ARTIST MANAGEMENT

Organizing the professional lives of our clients and showcasing the skills of overqualified yet usually overlooked artists throughout the industry. We utilize the content of each client to generate a fan base for each project, to create a structure and order of importance in our clients careers. In addition, managing social media and websites while giving a glance into portfolios and resumes, thus revealing the detail and dedication to our priceless expertise.

+ EVENT COORDINATION

Our event coordination abilities have created an industry within itself and are embraced by everybody from the hottest nightclubs, venues to promoters and talent buyers in and out of town. We provide and/or supply everything for coordinated private parties and corporate functions including the security, graphic designs, to custom built marketing campaigns and talent. Within one company we have been able to slowly but surely evolve into a full fledged one stop shop for all your event coordination needs.

+ CELEBRITY BOOKING

Nationally trademarked and a leader in musical and celebrity appearances, Money Power Respect Entertainment's celebrity and talent booking department represents artists in all musical genres. As any good business should focus on more than one genre, we specialize in a wide range of music including pop, rock, R&B, hip-hop, indie and adult contemporary, as well as the world's most recognizable celebrities. The department arranges national engagements and tours in a wide variety of settings and venues for the most popular performers and recording artists working today.

+ STUDIO PRODUCTION

Money Power Respect Entertainment's recording studio is a state-of-the-art, full-service tracking mix-down and overdub recording studio housed within the corporate office conveniently located in the heart of Scottsdale, Arizona. The studio is equipped with software including but not limited to Pro tools 9 and Logic 9 along side the latest and greatest plug-ins we've conveniently set the stage for capturing that timeless sound needed in this day and age.

+ CREATIVE DIRECTION

With 15 years collective experience in the print layout, branding, and creative consulting industry our graphic design team which is lead by Jason Hughes carries experience including 8 years in the national advertising department at Gannett's Arizona outfit The Arizona Republic. Our ability to design within different mediums and forms of media such as company fliers, print advertisement, product design, logo creation, packaging, web design, using professional and commercial layouts and much more allows us to take a strong stance in the industry to dominate any competitor through vivid expressions of crisp fine lines and creative influence at competitive pricing.

Money Power Respect Entertainment Pushes Local Hip-Hop on a Large Scale

By Niki D'Andrea

Published Tue., Jul. 12 2011 at 9:00 AM

Cahleb Branch, head of Money Power Respect, works at his desk.

How much does it cost to book GZA from Wu-Tang Clan? Or Lil Jon? Or Nicki Minaj?

Cahleb Branch knows, because his company, Valley-based Money Power Respect Entertainment, books international shows for them, among a slew of other well-known hip-hop artists. But beyond that, the five year-old company's established an innovative, all-encompassing business model for local hip-hop acts. Branch puts Phoenix acts in opening slots for national acts; handles merchandise production, promotions, video, and graphic design; installed a state-of-the-art recording studio at the MPR offices in Old Town Scottsdale; and works hand-in-hand with the ASU Herberger School of Music to procure interns and get feedback on local artist releases.

"It's a well-oiled machine that we're building," Branch says.

There are four local hip-hop acts on the MPR roster: Cut Throat Logic, The New F-O's, Mathmadix, and The Mob Fam. Over the past few years, Branch has booked his bands to open for artists like Young Buck,

The wall in Branch's office displays some of his favorite signed photos.

Too $hort, and KRS-One (the latter two have also recorded on tracks with Cut Throat Logic). There's a whole process in place when it comes to new albums. When one of the MPR artists records a new record, Branch brings it to Dr. Richard Mook at ASU's Herberger School of Music, who then lets his students review the albums for extra credit. Branch says the student feedback also helps determine the final song list on the albums.

Once an album's released or a show's booked, MPR sends out a street team to plaster areas with fliers and posters. But they also reinforce promotions online and through phone apps. "It's looked upon as guerrilla marketing," Branch says. "If you're on the freeway and see a poster, or you see a flier at a coffee shop, then you go online and find things on Facebook, it reinforces."

embracing the technology completely," Branch says. "We basically catch the consumer where they shop or eat or hang out."

MPR uses technology like the Moby Chip, which allows people to take a photo of a digital stamp and link to content online through their phones. "We're Engineer J-Beam works on a drum beat in one of the MPR studios.

In January, the company moved into some swank offices in Scottsdale, which include a recording studio (complete with reel-to-reel and digital equipment, twin turntables, and a separate vocal booth), and a full apartment for visiting music artists to stay in. The lobby includes leather couches and a giant, flat-screen plasma TV. When we visited the offices, the TV showed a promotional video for MPR that included props from Rick Ross and Warren G.

All they need now is a new website, which Branch says is in the works and will launch at www.mprent.com soon. The site will include a point of contact for booking acts, as well as MPR's other services, which Branch says are open to the public (but the posh offices are not; appointments are required). "Being on the waterfront, in walking distance from shopping and nightlife, is wonderful," Branch says of the office location. "If you sit in the office and look through the blinds, it's easy to close deals on the view alone."
